MUCH DAMAGE IN RUNAWAY

Horse of J. R. Wineman Runs away, Damaging Delivery Wagon and Sustaining Injury which may Prove Fatal.

The horse of J. B. Wineman, Centre Square grocer, was seriously injured and the delivery wagon of the store damaged extensively in a runaway which occurred on Thursday. It is feared that the injuries sustained by the horse may make it unfit for further service.

John Bowers had been delivering goods at the Seminary refectory and had gone into the building, allowing the horse to stand without being tied During his absence the animal started away and ran on Confederate avenue to Springs avenue where it turned towards town. Half way in that street the wagon overturned and the top was crushed a wheel mashed and other damage sustained. The shafts were broken and a long piece of wood entered one of the horse's hind legs above the foot, penetrating a great distance and inflicting a wound which it is feared, will permanently disable the animal.

After being freed from the wagon the horse continued on towards Chambersburg street and took to the pavement at the Slentz property, continuing around the square on the side walk. After running for some distance it was finally caught. Dr. Hudson is making an effort to save the horse.

That more persons were not about at the time likely averted more disastrous results from the runaway.

THAT COLLEGE STRIKE

The Harrisburg Telegraph sees fit to comment editorially upon a "threatened strike" among the students of Gettysburg College. Several Philadelphia papers last week published stories on a strike being threatened in the Senior class because one of its members had been expelled for cheating in examinations. The Seniors had no thought of striking, it is said, and the expelled member was re-instated after all his classmates promised to desist from unfair methods in examinations What the "Telegraph" has to say is interesting nevertheless:

"Because a popular athlete of the class of 1912 has been expelled by the faculty for 'riding a horse,' which is the vernacular for using translations, the seniors at Gettysburg College threaten to go on strike.

"While it may be only natural that a young man of athletic tendencies should be fond of horseback riding, and while the loyal friendship of his classmates is to be commended, it is difficult to see how the faculty could have acted differently, or how it could rescind its order of expulsion without grave injury to college discipline.

"It is not denied by the students that the horseman 'rode,' or that he had been duly warned of the punishment that would be visited upon him if he continued the exercises. The only argument advanced in his favor is that he was one of many who cheat in class and that it is unfair to single him out as a victim.

"If this same argument were advanced in criminal procedure, it would be pleasant for the burglars and murderers and highwaymen. We can't catch all of them. Therefore, it is unfair to punish the few we do catch.

"Nor are the proud parents, who are footing the college bills of their off-spring, in the belief that they are making their way bravely on foot through the classics, likely to find fault with the faculty for insisting that they shall walk or get out."

INDIANS HERE ON TRIP WEST

Family of Twenty Three Cherokee Indians from Oklahoma Stop at Gettysburg on Return Trip Home. Travel by Team,

Twenty three Cherokee Indians, all one family—originally spotted as gypsies when they drove into Gettysburg on Wednesday but later found to be real red men and women—were here for several days on their return trip to Oklahoma from where they started five months ago for Washington to secure land on a government reservation. They accomplished the object of their visit and a week ago started on the return trip, arriving here in Wednesday's driving rain and deciding to stay until weather conditions became more favorable.

Mrs. Mary Leban, is the leading spirit in the bunch. She and her husband with their twenty one children, fifteen girls and six boys, make up as good natured a party as any picnickers which ever out of Gettysburg for a Fourth of July outing. The entire crowd was quartered in the stable formerly occupied by Warren and Weikert, their caravan of five wagons and twelve horses occupying the main part of the building and the family using the small office.

"Are these all your children?" asked a News representative of the mother.

"Sure, can't you see them?" she replied. "It's a full house"

"How many are there?"

"Ah, papooses a plenty. Twenty one in all."

"Who has charge of the party?" was the next question

"Me the boss. My husband's along and all my family It's all one big family. That tall man is my son."

There are two tall men in the party, one the father and the other the oldest son who, with the mother, seems to be personally conducting the overland tour.

Plenty of bad weather was encountered on the way east but the entire crowd kept in good health according to their own statements. Their horses are in fine shape too and appear to be well fed and well taken care of. The women make some money selling trinkets and telling fortunes, carrying papers from various mayors and others in authority giving Mrs. Leban recommendations and permitting her to ply her trade in their various bailiwicks. Burgess Holtzworth refused similar permission here.

MONEY IN MAIL BOX PRACTICE MUST END

Postmaster G. Wm. Beales has received notice from Postmaster Hitchcock at Washington to instruct the rural free delivery route carriers to caution persons owning mail boxes along their routes against the practice of depositing money in such boxes for which to pay for money orders or registration of letters, instead of personally seeing the carrier and having the order filled out in the regulation way.

The postoffice department holds that the practice of placing money in the mail boxes is too conducive to theft and dishonesty, with resulting loss, besides affording no end of difficulty and possible embarrassment to the carrier. Hereafter in every such case reported or discovered the postmaster and carrier will call attention to the risk incurred and will request the person to desist. The carrier will do this in person, if possible. Leaving the receipt in the box, he will fill out an application form from the patron, according to directions left by the latter, and will present the application, with money, at the postoffice.

The post office in transmitting the receipt detached from the coupon of the money order will inclose a note informing the applicant that, in purchasing a money order in future, to avoid risk of loss he must pay the money to the carrier personally, taking a receipt or must appear in person at the postoffice.

OFFICIAL PEACH NEWS

Reports to Professor H. A. Surface, of the Division of Zoology of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, indicate that the peach crop of the state this year may show little improvement over that of last year, when the crop was a general failure. All the buds examined from several counties, with one exception, were found to have been killed by the recent cold weather. In one lot received from the Cumberland Valley enough live buds were found to insure a fair crop. In the weekly bulletin issued by his office Professor Surface advises fruit growers to examine their buds and prepare those trees that have been damaged for the bearing of a good crop next year. "It is not a difficult matter for growers to determine whether or not their buds have been killed," he says "This is accomplished by cutting open the large round blossom buds, being sure to cut to the centre. If the bud is alive a very small thread in its natural green color will be seen in the centre extending to the pistil. If the bud has been damaged the centre will be found to be brown or black If 5 per cent. of the buds are found to be alive it will be enough to insure a fair crop. If practically all the buds are found to have been killed this is the season of the year to commence pruning back in order to produce an abundance of new wood growth this coming summer, which will set fruit buds for the next year's crop. This should be combined with proper cultivation and fertilization. If this is done the coming period of scant peach production can be turned into partial fruitfulness in the increased crop for the following year."

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY

(From the Sioux City Tribune.)

The first three days of July 1913, are the fiftieth anniversary of the sanguinary battle of Gettysburg, and the State of Pennsylvania, within whose borders the battle was fought, has arranged for a fitting celebration. It is to be the occasion of a general union of all the Confederate States with the Northern States in a season of fellowship. The Northern and the Southern veterans are to meet on an equal footing The gentle dove of peace will brood over this great gathering.

True comradeship is indeed exemplified in the plans for this celebration of a great battle, a joint celebration by the survivors of the opposing armies. Never has an attempt been made on such a large scale to get the Blue and the Gray together to sing a song of peace that shall drown the echoes of the din of battle. Well will it be if in the half century celebration of the terrible battle of Gettysburg shall disappear the last of the bitterness and prejudice that have divided the North and South.

RAILROADERS TO COME ON MAY 30

Five Thousand from this Country, Mexico and Canada in Convention will Send Hundreds here for Memorial Day.

Of the five thousand members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers from all parts of this country, Mexico and Canada, who will attend the annual convention at Harrisburg the last week in May, it is expected that a large proportion will come to Gettysburg for Memorial Day, the officials of the organization taking an active part in the preparations for the observance of the day here.

During the autumn the local Grand Army Post received a request from those having in charge the convention asking that they be allowed to secure an orator for the Memorial Day celebration here, stating that they expected to bring the convention visitors to Gettysburg on that day. The request contained the assurance that some man of note would be secured No word having been received of any selection having been made, the committee from the local post recently asked for information regarding the matter and were again assured that a suitable orator would be provided and the matter still rests with the railroad people.

The convention itself is to be of more than usual importance. One of the suggestions to be considered is that proposing that the brotherhood build a railroad and operate it independently. The plan originated with a member in Omaha, Neb., and he states that if the plan is carried into reality the Chamber of Commerce of Omaha will give, free of charge, all the terminal facilities necessary. The plan is that the 50,000 members each buy $100 worth of stock in the enterprise and build 400 miles of road through Nebraska.

The two big problems to come before the convention are the pension system and the advisability of reducing the cost of the session by reducing the number of delegates. Both these matters will come up for consideration and occupy considerable time of the convention. It is hoped that some system whereby a pension for the engineers upon retirement from the service can be made effective. A plan was presented at the convention in Detroit two years ago and the committee to which it was referred deemed it would not be practicable.

HAS BUGLE PLAYER ON WAY TO GETTYSBURG

J. H. Brown, of York, who has been a bandmaster for 30 years, has devoted much of his leisure time to the collection of antiquated band instruments, and he has 15 with "records"

One of the instruments is a solid, hand-worked copper-keyed bugle that was made to use in military bands to play melody, and when the cornet was invented this bugle style was abandoned It was an invention by Saxe in 1815, and was called the Saxehorn. This bugle was the property of Ammon King, of East Berlin, Adams County, who played with Ewell's Brigade band on the way to Gettysburg in 1863.

Another instrument is the Ophicleide, made in 1790 He is the owner of what is called the Serpent, made of wood, the first instrument made to play bass parts. It is an invention of 1590.

CLEARED OVER $44.00

The oyster tea given at the home of Mrs Paul Martin on Broadway Saturday afternoon for the benefit of Samuel Knox yielded between $44.00 and $45 00. A subscription list which has been circulated in town secured about $21.00 and this, with the $32.70 from the Wizard benefit performance, makes a total given by town people of more than $97.00. Mr. Knox suffers excruciating pain from his wounds which will require several months to heal. It is stated that after they have healed sufficiently it will be necessary to have the one wrist straightened.

ACCIDENTS

Marguerite, the young daughter of Pius Wagaman, McSherrystown, fell off a chair recently and broke her arm.

CHAPTER XIV.

From India's Coral Strands.

Mrs. Higgins, in Miss Lane's apartment at the Savoy, was adjusting the photographs and arranging the flowers when she was surprised by a caller, who came up without the formality of sending his name.

"Do you think," Blair asked her, "that Miss Lane would see me half a minute? I called yesterday, and the day before, as soon as I saw that there was a substitute singing in Mandalay. Tell her I'm as full of news as a charity report, please, and I rather guess that will fetch her."

Something fetched her, for in a few minutes she came languidly in, and by the way she smiled at her visitor it might be thought Dan Blair's name alone had brought her in. The actress had been ill for a fortnight with what the press notices said was influenza. She wore a teagown, long and white as foam, her hair rolled in a soft knot, and her face was pale as death. Frail and small as she was, she was more ethereal than when in perfect health.

"Don't stand a minute." And by the hand she gave him Dan led her over to the lounge where the pillows were piled and a fur-lined silk cover thrown across the sofa.

"Don't give me that heavy rug, there's that little white shawl." She pointed to it, and Dan, as he gave it to her, recognized the shawl in which she wrapped herself when she crossed the icy wings.

He sat down by her. She began to cough violently and he asked, troubled, "Who's taking care of you, anyway?"

"Higgins and a couple of doctors."

"That's all?"

"Yes. Why, who should be?"

Dan didn't follow up his jealous suspicion, but asked in a tone almost paternal and softly confidential:

"How are your finances getting on?"

"Oh, I'm all right; Higgins told me you had some news about my poor people."

The fact that she did not take up the financial subject made him unpleasantly sure that her wants had been supplied.

"Got a whole bunch of news," Dan replied cheerfully. "I went to see the old man and the girl in their diggings. Gosh, you couldn't believe such things were true."

She drew her fine brows together. "I guess there are a good many things that would surprise you. But you don't need to tell me about hard times.

"Now Please Do Tell Me About the Poor People."

That's the way I am. I'll do anything, give anything, so long as I don't have to hear hard stories." She turned to him confidentially. "Perhaps it's getting in false scenes on the stage; perhaps it's because I'm lazy and selfish, but I can't bear to hear about tales of woe."

What she said somewhat disturbed his idea of her big-hearted charity.

"I don't believe you're lazy or selfish," he said sincerely, "but I've got an idea that not many people really know you."

This amused her. Looking at him quizzically, she laughed. "I expect you think you do."

Dan answered: "Well, I guess the people that see you when you are a kid, who came from your own part of the country, have a sort of friendship." And the girl on the sofa from the depths of her shawl put out a thin little hand to him and said in a voice as lovely in tone as when she sang in Mandalay:

"Well, I guess that's right! I guess that's about true."

After the tenth of a second, in which she thought best to take her little cold hand away from those big warm ones, she asked:

"Now please do tell me about the poor people."

In this way giving him to understand how really true his better idea of her had been.

"Why, the old duffer is as happy as a house afire," said the boy. "Not to boast, I've done the whole thing up as well as I knew how. I've got him into that health resort you spoke of, and the girl seems to have got a regular education vice! She wants to study something, so she's going to school."

"Go on talking," the actress invited languidly. "I love to hear you talk Montana! Don't change your twang for this beastly English drawl, whatever you do."

"You have, though, Miss Lane. I don't hear a thing of Blairtown in the way you speak."

And the girl said passionately: "I wish to God I spoke it right through! I wish I had never changed my speech or anything in me that was like home."

And the boy leaning forward as eagerly exclaimed: "Oh, do you mean that? Think how crazy London is about you! Why, if you ever go back to Montana, they will carry you from the cars in a triumphal chair through the town."

She waited until she could control the emotion in her voice.

"Go on telling me about the little girl."

"She was so trusting as to give the money up to me and I guess it will draw interest for her all right."

"Thank you," smiled the actress, "you are terribly sweet. The child got Higgins to let her into my dressing-room one day after a matinee. I haven't time to see anybody except them."

Here Higgins made her appearance in the room, with an egg-nog for her lady, which, after much coaxing, Dan succeeded in getting the actress to drink. Higgins also had taken away the flowers, and Letty Lane said to Dan:

"I send them to the hospital; they make me sick." And Dan timidly asked,

"Mine, too?"

This brought a flush across the ivory pallor of her cheek. "No, no, Higgins keeps them in the next room." And with an abrupt change of subject she asked: "Is the Duchess of Breakwater very charitable?" And Blair quickly replied:

"Anyhow she wants you to sing for her at a musicale in Park Lane when you're fit."

Miss Lane gave a soft little giggle. "Is that what you call being charitable?"

Dan blushed crimson and exclaimed: "Well, hardly!"

"Did you come here to ask me that?"

"I came to tell you about 'our mutual poor.' You'll let me call them that, won't you, because I happened to be in your dressing-room when they struck their vein?"

Miss Lane had drawn herself up in the corner of the sofa, and sat with her hands clasped around her knees, all swathed around and draped by the knitted shawl, her golden head like a radiant flower, appearing from a bank of snow. Her fragility, her sweetness, her smallness, appealed strongly to the big young fellow, whose heart was warm toward the world, whose ideals were high, and who had the chivalrous longing inherent in all good men to succor, to protect, and above all to adore. No feeling in Dan Blair had been as strong as this, to take her in his arms, to lift her up and carry her away from London and the people who applauded her, from the people that criticised her, and from Poniatowsky.

He was engaged to the Duchess of Breakwater. And as far as his being able to do anything for Letty Lane, he could only offer her this politeness from the woman he was going to marry.

"I never sing out of the theater." Her profile was to him and she looked steadily across the room. "It's a perfect fight to get the manager to consent."

Blair interrupted and said: "Oh, I'll see him; I'll make it all right."

"Please don't," she said briskly, "it's purely a business affair. How much will she pay?"

Dan was rather shocked. "Anything you like."

And her bad humor faded at his tone, and she smiled at him. "Well, I'll tell Roach that. I guess it'll make my singing a sure thing."

She changed her position and drew a long sigh as though she were very tired, leaned her blond head with its soft disorder back on the pillow, put both her folded hands under her cheek and turned her face toward Dan. The most delicate coral-like color began to mount her cheeks, and her gray eyes regained their light.

"Will two thousand dollars be too much to ask?" she said gently.

If she had said two million to the young fellow who had not yet begun to spend his fortune, which as far as he was concerned was nothing but a name, it would not have been too much to him; not too much to have given to this small white creature with her lovely flushed face, and her glorious hair.

"Whatever is your price, Miss Lane, goes."

"I'll sing three songs: one from Mandalay, an English ballad and something or other, I don't know what now, and I expect you don't realize how cheaply you are getting them." She laughed, and began to hum a familiar air.

"For another thousand?" she asked, lifting her eyebrows. "What song is it?"

And as Dan hesitated, as if unwilling to give form to words that were so full of spell to him, she said deliciously: "Why, can you see a London drawing-room listening to me sing Presbyterian hymn tune?" Without lifting her head from the pillow she began in a charming undertone, her gray eyes fixed on his:

> "From Greenland's icy mountains,
> From India's coral strands,
> Where Afric's sunny fountains
> Roll down their golden sands."

Blair, near her, turned pale. There rose in him the same feeling that she had stirred years ago in the little church, and at the same time others. He had lost his father since then, and he thought of him now, but that big, sad emotion was not the one that swayed him.

"Please stop," he pleaded; "don't go on. Say, there's something in that hymn that hurts."

Letty Lane, unconscious of how subtly she was playing, laughed, and suddenly remembered that Dan had sat before her that day by the side of old Mr. Blair. She asked abruptly:

"Why does the Duchess of Breakwater want me to sing?"

"Because she's crazy about your voice."

"Is she awfully rich?"

"Um . . . I don't know."

Letty Lane flashed a look at him. "Oh," she said coolly, "I guess she won't pay the price then."

Dan said: "Yes, she will; yes, she will, all right."

"Now," Letty Lane went on, "if it were a charity affair, I could sing for nothing, and I don't doubt the duchess, if she is as benevolent as you say she is, could get me up some kind of a charity show."

Dan, who had started to rise, now leaned toward her and said: "Don't you worry about it a bit. If you'll come and sing we will make it right about the price and the charity; everything shall go your way."

She was seized upon by a violent fit of coughing, and Dan leaned toward her and put his arm around her as a brother might have done, holding her tenderly until the paroxysm was past.

"Gosh!" he exclaimed fervently, "it's heart-breaking to hear you cough like that and to think of your working as you do. Can't you stop and take a good rest? Can't you go somewhere?"

"To Greenland's icy mountains?" she responded, smiling. "I hate the cold."

"No, no; to some golden sands or other," he murmured under his breath. "And let me take you there."

But she pushed him back, laughing now. "No golden sands for me. I'm afraid I've got to sing in Mandalay tonight."

He looked at her in dismay.

She interrupted his protest: "I've promised on my word of honor, and the box-office has sold the seats with that understanding."

By her sofa, leaning over her, in a choked voice he murmured:

"You shan't sing! You shan't go out tonight!"

"Don't be a goose, boy," she said. "You've no right to order me like that. Stand back, please." As he did so she whisked herself off the sofa with a sudden ardor and mock grace. "Now," she told him severely, "since you've begun to take that tone with me, I'm going to tell you that you mustn't come here day after day as you have been doing. I guess you know it, don't you?"

He stood his ground, but his bright face clouded. They had been so near each other and were now so removed.

"I don't care a damn what people say," he replied.

She interrupted him. She could be wonderfully dignified, small as she was, wrapped as she was in the woolen shawl. "Well," she drawled with a sudden indolence and indifference in her voice, "I expect you'll be surprised to hear that I do care. Sounds awfully fussy, doesn't it? But as you have been coming to the theater new night after night till everybody's talking about it—"

"You don't want my friendship," he stammered.

Her tone struck him deeply; hurt him terribly. He threw his head up defiantly.

"All right, I'm turned down then," he said simply.

"Don't be silly, you know as well as I do that it won't do."

He did know it and that he had already done enough to make it reasonable for the duchess, if she wanted to, to break their engagement. Slowly preparing to take his leave, he said wistfully. "Can't I help you in any way! Let me do something with you for your poor. It's a comfort to have them between us, and you can count on me."

She said she knew it. "But don't come any more to the wings; get a habit of not coming."

On the threshold of her door he asked her to let him know when she would sing in Park Lane, and in touching her hand he repeated that she must count on him. With more tenderness in his blue eyes than he was himself aware, he murmured devotedly:

"Take care of yourself, won't you, please?"

As Blair passed from the sitting-room into the hall and toward the lift, Mrs Higgins came out hurriedly from one of the rooms and joined him.

"How did you find her, Mr. Blair?"

"Awfully seedy, Mrs. Higgins; she needs a lot of care."

"She won't take it though," returned the woman. "Just seems to let herself go, not to mind a bit, especially these last weeks. I'm glad you came in; I've been hoping you would, sir."

"I'm not any good though, she won't listen to a word I say."

It seemed to surprise the dressing woman.

"I'm sorry to hear it, sir; I thought she would. She talks about you often."

He colored like a school-boy. "Gosh, it's a shame to have her kill herself for nothing." Reluctant to talk longer with Mrs. Higgins, he added in spite of himself: "She seems so lonely."

"It's two weeks now since that human devil went away," Mrs. Higgins said unexpectedly, looking quietly into the blue eyes of the visitor. "She hasn't opened one of his letters or his telegrams. She has sold every pin and brooch he ever gave her, scattered the money far and wide. You saw how she went on with Cohen, and her pearls."

Dan heard her as through a dream. Her words gave form and existence to a dreadful thing he had been trying to deny.

"Is she hard up now, Mrs Higgins?" he asked softly. And glancing at him to see just how far she might go, the woman said:

"An actress who spends and lives as Miss Lane does is always hard up."

"Could you use money without her knowing about it?"

"Lord," exclaimed the woman, "it wouldn't be hard, sir! She only knows that there is such a thing as money when the bills come and she hasn't got a penny. Or when the poor come! She's got a heart of gold, sir, for everybody that is in need."

He took out of his wallet a wad of notes and put them in Higgins' hands. "Just pay up some bills on the sly, and don't you tell her on your life. I don't want her to be worried." Explaining with sensitive understanding: "It's all right, Mrs. Higgins; I'm from her town, you know." And the woman, who admired him and understood him, and whose life had made her keen to read things as they were, said earnestly:

"I quite understand how it is, sir. It is just as though it came straight from 'ome. She overdraws her salary months ahead."

"Have you been with Miss Lane long?"

"Ever since she toured in Europe, and nobody could serve her without being very fond of her indeed."

Dan put out his big warm hand eagerly. "You're a corker, Mrs. Higgins."

"Go ahead and do it then," he smiled, "and I'll pay for all the boot leather you wear out!"

As he went down-stairs, already too late to keep an engagement made with his fiancee, he stopped in the writing-room to scribble off a note of excuse to the duchess. At the opposite table Dan saw Prince Poniatowsky, writing, as well. The Hungarian did not see Blair, and when he had finished his note he called a page boy and Dan could hear him send his letter up to Miss Lane's suite. The young westerner thought with confident exultation, "Well, he'll get left all right, and I'm darned if I don't sit here and see him turned down!"

"Will you please come upstairs, sir?"

CHAPTER XV.

Galorey Gives Advice.

Lord Galorey had long been used to seeing things go the way they would and should not, and his greatest effort had been attained on the day he gave his languid body the trouble to go in and see Ruggles.

"My God," he muttered as he watched Dan and the duchess on the terrace together—they were nevertheless undeniably a handsome pair—"to think that this is the way I am returning old Blair's hospitality!" And he was ashamed to recall his western experiences, when in a shack in the mountains he had watched the big stars come out in the heavens and sat late with old Dan Blair, delighted with the simple philosophies and the man's high ideals.

"What the devil does it all mean?" he wondered. "She has simply seduced him, that' all."

He got Dan finally to himself and without any preparation began, pushing Dan back into a big leather chair, and standing up like a judge over him:

"Now, you really must listen to me, my dear chap. I shan't rest in my grave unless I get a word with you. Your father sent you here to me and I'm damned if I know what for. I've been wondering every day about it for two months. He didn't know what this set was like or how rotten it is."

"What set?" The boy looked appallingly young as Gordon stared down at him. There wasn't a line or wrinkle on his smooth brow or on his lips and forehead finely cut and well molded—but there were the very seals of what his father would have been glad to see. The boy had the same clear look and unspoiled frankness that had charmed Galorey at the first. He had been a lazy coward to delay so long.

"Why, the rottenness of this set right here in my house." And as the host began to see that he should have to approach a woman's name in speaking, he stopped short, his mouth wide open, and Dan thought he had been drinking.

"I am going to marry her."

"You mustn't."

Blair got up out of his chair. It didn't need this attack of Galorey's to bring to his mind hints that had been dropped that Galorey was in love with the Duchess of Breakwater. It illuminated what Galorey was saying fast and incoherently.

"I mean to say, my dear chap, that you mustn't marry the Duchess of Breakwater. Look at most of these European marriages. They all go to smash. She is older than you are and she has lived her life. You are much too young."

"Hold up, Galorey; you mustn't go on, you know. You know I am engaged; that's all there is about it. Now, let's go and have a game of pool."

Galorey had not worked himself up to this pitch to break off now at a fatal point.

"I'm responsible for this, and by gad, Dan, I'm going to put you on your guard."

"You are responsible for nothing, Galorey, and I warn you to drop it."

"You would listen to your father if he were here, wouldn't you?"

"I don't know," said the boy slowly. Then followed up with an honest, "Yes, I would."

Gordon caught eagerly, "Well, he sent you to me. Your friend Ruggles has gone off and washed his hands of you, but I can't."

Lord Galorey walked across the room briskly and came back to Dan. "First of all, you are not in love with Lily—not a bit of it. You couldn't be—and what's more she is not in love with you."

Blair laughed coolly. "You certainly have got things down to a fine point, Gordon. I'll be hanged if I understand your game."

Galorey went bravely on: "Therefore, if neither of you are in love, you understand that there is nothing between you but your money."

The Englishman got his point out brutally, relieved that the impersonal thing money opened a way for him. He didn't want to be the bounder and the cad that the mention of the woman would have made him.

The boy drew in an angry breath. "Gosh," he said, "that cursed money will make me crazy yet! You are not very flattering to me, Gordon, I swear, and Lily wouldn't thank you for the motives you impute to her."

"Oh, rot!" returned Gordon more tranquilly. "She hasn't got a human sentiment in her. She's a rock with a woman's face."

Dan turned his back on his host and walked off into the billiard-room. Galorey promptly followed him, took down a cue and chalked it, and said:

"Well, come now; let's put it to the test." Blair began stacking the balls.

"How do you mean?"

"Well, when you have had time to get your first news over from Ruggles, tell her you have gone to smash and that you are a pauper."

"I don't play tricks like that," said the westerner quietly.

"No," responded Galorey bitterly, "you let others play tricks on you."

The young man threw his cue smartly down, his youth looked contemptuously at the worldly man, and he turned pale, but he said in a low voice:

"Now, you've got to let up on this, Gordon; I thought at first you had been drinking. I won't listen. Let's get on another subject, or I'll clear out."

Galorey, however, cool and pitiful of the tangle in the boy's affairs, wouldn't let himself be angry. "You are my old chum's boy, Dan," he went on, "and I'm not going to stand by and see you spoil your life in silence. You are of age. You can go to the devil if you like, but you can't go there under my roof, without a word from me."

"Then I'll get out from under your roof, tonight."

"Right! I don't blame you there, but, before you go, tell Lily you have lost your money, and see what she is made of. My dear chap"—he changed his tone to one of affection—"don't be an ape; listen to me, for your father's sake; remember your whole life's happiness is in this game. Isn't it worth looking after?"

"Not at the risk of hurting a woman's feelings," said the boy.

"How can it hurt her, my dear man, to tell her you are poor?"

"It's a lie. I'm not up to lying to her; I don't care to. And you mean to think that if I told her I was busted she would throw me over?"

"Like a shot, my green young friend—like a shot."

"You haven't a very good opinion of women," Blair threw out with as near a sneer as his fine young face could express.

"No, not very," agreed the pool player, who had continued his shots with more or less sangfroid. When Galorey had run off his string of balls he said, looking up from the table: "But I've got a very good opinion of that 'nice girl' you told me of when you first came, and I wish to Heaven she had kept you in the states."

This caught the boy's attention as nothing else had. "There never was any such girl," he said slowly; "there never has been anywhere; I rather guess they don't grow. You have made me a cad in listening to you, Gordon, but as to playing any of those comedy tricks you suggest, they are not in my line. If she is marrying me for my money, why, she'll get it."

"You're a coward," said Galorey, "like the rest of American husbands—all ideal and no common sense. You want to make a mess of your life. You haven't the grit to get out of a bad job."

He spurred himself on and his weak face grew strong as he felt he was compelling the boy's attention. "If you only had half the character your father had, you wouldn't make a mistake like this; you wouldn't run blind into such a deal as this."

Blair was impressed by his host. Galorey was so deadly in earnest and so honest, and, as Dan's face grew set and hardened, his companion prayed for wisdom. "If I can only win through this without touching Lily hard," he thought, and as he waited Blair said:

"You haven't hesitated to call me names, Gordon. You're not my build or my age, and I can't thresh you."

And his host said cheerfully: "Oh, yes, you can; come on and try," and, metaphorically speaking, Dan struck his first blow:

"They say—people have said to me—that you once cared for Lily yourself."

The Englishman's heavy eyelids did not flicker. "It's quite true."

Taken back by this frank response, Blair stammered: "Well, I guess that explains everything. It's not surprising that you should feel as you do. If you are jealous, I can forgive it a little bit, but it is low down to call a woman a fortune hunter."

Now Gordon Galorey's face changed and grew slightly white. "Don't make me angry, my dear chap," he said in a low tone; "I have said what I wanted to say. Now, go to the devil if you like and as soon as you like."

And the boy said hotly, stammering in his excitement:

"Not yet—not yet—not before I tell you what I think."

Gordon, with wonderful control of his own anger, met the boy's eyes, and said with great patience:

"No, don't, Dan; don't go on. There are many things in this affair that we can't touch upon. Let it drop. The right woman would make a ripping man of you, but you oughtn't to marry for ten years."

Dan took the hand which Galorey put out to him, and the Englishman said warmly: "My dear chap, I hope it will all come out right, from my heart."

Dan, who had regained his balance, said to his friend:

"I've been very angry at what you said, but you're the chap my father sent me to. There must be something back of this, and I'm going to find out what it is, and I'm going to take my own way to find out. I wouldn't give a rap for anything that came to me through a trick or a lie, and I wouldn't know how to go to her with a cock-and-bull story. I shall act as I feel and go ahead being just as I am, and perhaps she won't want me after all, even if I have got the rocks!"

And Galorey said heartily: "I wish there was a chance of it."

When, later, Gordon thought of Dan it was with a glow. "What a chip of the old block he is," he said; "what a good bit of character, even at twenty-two years." He was divided between feeling that he had made a mess of things between Dan and himself, and feeling sure that some of his advice had gone home. After a moment's silence, Dan Blair's son said: "I'm going up to London tomorrow."

"For long?"

"Don't know."

Thus returning with boyish simplicity to their subject, which Galorey thought had been dropped, Dan said:

"There may be something true in what you say, Gordon. Perhaps she does want my money. I'm not a titled man and I'll never be known for anything except my income. At any rate I was rich when I asked her to marry me, and I'm going to fix up that old place of hers, and I'm glad I've got the coin to do it."

When, later, for they had been interrupted in their conversation by the entrance of the lady herself, Gordon, as Ruggles had done, mentally thought of the flowing tide of life, and how it flowed over what he himself had called "rotten ground." Perhaps old Blair was right, he mused, after all. What does it matter if the source is pure at the head water? It's awfully hard to force it at the start, at least.

KIRSSIN STORE IS BURGLARIZED

Kirssin Clothing Store Entered during Early Morning Hours by Thief who Picked Outfit of Goods. Little Money Taken.

The clothing store of Lewis E Kirssin, on Baltimore street, was entered at an early hour Tues morning, the burglar taking an entire outfit of clothing and about seventy cents in change—all the money which had been left in the room when the store was closed on Monday evening.

Mr. Kirssin thinks that several pairs of shoes, a suit of clothing, some stockings and other furnishings and possibly an overcoat were taken. The thief had rummaged through piles of suits and overcoats to make his selection.

Entrance was gained by the front door, a chisel being used to force the door at the lock. Mr. Kirssin found the door standing open when he went his place in the morning and as soon as he entered saw things in a state of disorder. The money removed had been taken from the cash drawer.

The shoes taken were size eight and Mr. Kirssin will have no trouble to identify either these or other articles should the thief be found. The matter has been placed in the hands of local officers

The burglary is of more than passing interest in view of a number of instances of petty thieving about town in the past few months, several stores being entered and small sums of money or tobacco usually being the reward secured by the operators.

LAWYERS IN TROUBLE

Twenty-five young lawyers, members of the Senior class of the Dickinson School of Law, were summoned on Monday by Chief of Police John L. Boyer to appear at a session of police court Tuesday evening to answer the charge of disorderly conduct on the streets. It is stated that other informations charging malicious mischief will be lodged against nearly every member of the class

The fracas is the result of a class nig roast held at the Letort Hotel last Friday night. Following the feed the class marched twenty-five abreast up Main street, giving the school and class yells with their various accompaniments, until a point near the station was reached. Instantly the young attorneys scattered, it is said, and in a few seconds signs of all descriptions, barber poles, etc., were torn from their fastenings and broken Loose lumber was taken from a building where work was being done, and the doors of the co-eds' dormitory near the law school were barricaded. The young men are trying to have the cases settled and are willing to pay for all damage done.

Miss Long, the only lady member of the class was not at the gathering, and she was voted a five pound box of chocolates

CELEBRATED ANNIVERSRAY

College Boys Used to be Compelled to Take off Shoes when they Attended Literary Society, 81st Anniversary.

Students at Gettysburg College in by-gone days were accustomed to suffer fines for failing to remove their shoes and put on slippers when they attended literary society sessions. In those same days the societies were the scenes of stormy debates lasting for hours at a time and the participants frequently waxing not only eloquent but angry in the discussions. These and many other stories of like interest were told at the eighty first anniversary celebration of the Phrena Literary Society at college on Friday evening.

The necessity of the students wearing slippers was brought about by the fact that heavy nails in soles and heels of their shoes were sure to wear out the carpet to the society hall when it used to be located in the Old Dormitory, and to save constantly renewing this part of the furnishings, a fine of 12 1-2 cents was imposed on a member every time he entered the room without first discarding his destructive foot gear.

Dr. T. C Billheimer was one of the speakers Friday evening and told of some of these things. An historical sketch of the society read by Mr Harst told of an old custom of electing men of note as honorary members, among those elected to Phrena Society being John Jacob Astor, Abraham Lincoln, James Monroe and others Abraham Lincoln accepted the election in a personal letter which was preserved for some years but which has since disappeared Some of the letters received from those elected are still preserved in the archives of the society.

One of the interesting features at Friday evening's celebration was the reading by Walter D Spangler of letters from William F. Eyster, D. D., of the class of 1869, and of Wm. Gearhart, D. D., of the class of 1841, from the oldest living graduates of the college and both of them members the society who wrote specially for the anniversary exercises.

The remainder of the program was made up of musical numbers and readings.

WIDELY KNOWN MINISTER DEAD

Rev. D. P. Schaeffer, Evangelical Minister, well known here and elsewhere, Dies at his Home in Idaville.

Rev. D. P. Schaeffer, pastor of the Idaville Evangelical charge died at the parsonage in Idaville at two o'clock Thursday afternoon after an illness of ten days from pneumonia, aged 64 years, 7 months and 9 days.

Rev. Mr. Schaeffer was a widely known Evangelical clergyman, a successful minister and a man who will be greatly mourned by all who knew him. He spent a large portion of his life in the Christian ministry and served many charges. His first pastorate was at Liverpool, Perry county, where he remained a year. For three years he was pastor at Hartleton, Union county; for similar periods at Lewisberry, York county; and Kralltown, York county; for two years at Blosserville, Cumberland county; for four years at Craleysville, York county; and for two years each at Bryansville, York county, and Idaville, Adams County.

On Sunday, February 10, he preached a touching farewell sermon at the Idaville church preparatory to meeting of Quarterly Conference. The discourse made a profound impression upon his hearers. The churches included in his last charge were Idaville, Beaver, Union and Flint Ridge, all of whose members were greatly attached to the minister. Rev. Mr. Schaeffer was a member of Washington Camp 330, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Millmont, Union County.

He leaves his wife, three sons and one daughter, Paul and David Schaeffer, of Altoona; James Schaeffer, of Clearfield; and Mrs. Lizzie Rice, of Mason and Dixon, Maryland. He also leaves one brother, living at Rocky Springs.

The body will be taken to Mason and Dixon for burial, leaving on the early train Monday morning. No services at Idaville.

SAVE $15,000 ON SOAP

When Chief Burgess Zacharias, of Chambersburg, advised the other officials of his town to take the water from Birch Run he declared that the people would save $7,000 or $8,000 a year in soap on account of the difference in the hardness of the Birch Run water and that of the old source of supply. Captain W. G. Davison asserts that he considered the statement a wild one, but he is now convinced the saving is at least $15,000 a year, as his family has not used more than 35 per cent. as much soap as formerly.

PARAGRAPHS OF TOWN NEWS NOTES

Improvement at College Church. Various Matters of Activity about Gettysburg. Signs of Spring are Reported.

A petition is being circulated among property owners asking council to take favorable action on brick paving for the streets in preference to asphalt

The council of the College Lutheran church expects to replace the old pews in the gallery of the church with new ones of different and more comfortable design

"Member of Parliament," a play to be given by the Sophomore class of college in Brua Chapel on March 6, is being advertised. Rehearsals have been going on for some weeks.

Town merchants are laying in their supplies of spring goods and some of the display windows of town already contain samples of spring suitings and other materials.

Council's timely action in securing a fire proof vault in which to place valuable papers has been the result of the apparent necessity for some safe place to store records which could never be replaced should they disappear or be destroyed.

Large attendance at spring sales is reported and the early sales are bringing good prices notwithstanding the fact that farmers have several extra weeks to feed stock purchased at this time.

Among the "sure signs of spring" reported to this office are the appearance of blue birds and snow drops. Blue birds are said to be a much more trustworthy indication of warm weather than robins and this time of the year is extremely early for snow drops to make their appearance above the ground.

Shrove Tuesday was not generally observed in Gettysburg but in many of the lower end towns the old custom of baking "Fastnacht cakes" is still carried out and in York and other nearby counties the custom is very generally observed.

HEAVY COSTS IN QUARANTINE CASE

Fine and Costs in Case against William Menchey Amount to Over Twenty Two Dollars. Could have been Heavier.

William F. Menchey was given a hearing before Squire Hill Fri. morning on a charge of violating quarantine regulations and a fine of $1.00 and costs amounting to $21.15 were imposed after hearing the evidence in the case.

The act governing such cases provides for a minimum fine of $50.00 but this was deemed excessive in view of the fact that the defendant explained his visits downtown the day following the placing of the quarantine by saying that he had gone for medicines under the direction of the physician in attendance, Dr. W. H. O'Neal. Mr Menchey claimed that the Board of Health should inquire after families' wants in cases of quarantines but inspection of the act showed that such care on the part of the health authorities was entirely optional.

In view of the offense being merely technical it was felt that the imposition of a fine of $50 with costs would be a persecution, when the health authorities wished only a reasonable result from just prosecution and, after conferring with J. Donald Swope, Esq., attorney for the county commissioners, the fine going to the county, it was decided to forego this and impose a nominal fine of $1.00. Should the commissioners refuse to accept this measure at their meeting on Tuesday it will be necessary for the $50 00 fine to stand, which with the costs would amount to $72 15. Of the costs $7 10 are for squire's and constable's fees and the balance are for expenses incurred by the health authorities in the case

The evidence at the hearing told chiefly of the quarantine being placed and of the subsequent appearance of Mr. Menchey on the streets of town. The visit of Mr. Wavell, health officer, to the Menchey home on the second day of the quarantine, after the violation was known was also told. John D. Keith, Esq., represented the Board of Health and Mr. Menchey conducted his own case. In addition to the testimony of Dr. Stewart and William Wavell, Dr. O'Neal certified to his report of the case, various documents were presented showing that the Board of Health had dealt properly in its conduct of the matter and Mr. Menchey told his side of the story.

The case was continued until today by which time it is expected that Mr. Menchey will have made arrangements for the payment of the fine and costs.

LARGE AUDIENCE AT CELEBRATION

Court House Crowded on Evening of Washington's Birthday for Exercises of Two Patriotic Orders.

The Court House was crowded almost to capacity on Thursday evening for the Washington's Birthday entertainment given under the auspices of the two patriotic orders of the town and a program, entertaining and delightful in every particular, was rendered. Even the aisles were used to accommodate the crowd and the large audience stayed for the entire program.

"America" and "The Star Spangled Banner" were led by an orchestra, the audience joining in the two songs while "We're Tenting Tonight" by the Rudisill Quartet and a number of songs by children added to the patriotic character of the evening's entertainment. Other numbers were in keeping with the spirit of the occasion. Miss Reba Miller sang several solos, Miss Lillian Kitzmiller recited as did Frank H. Kramer, and there was a musical trio by Edna Zincand, Ralph Gyler and William Zincand, Jr.

The two addresses of the evening were made by Prof. O. F. Sanders and Rev. J. B. Baker. Prof. Sanders' subject was "The Spirit of Patriotism" and he gave an earnest speech which received the close attention of the large audience. Rev. Mr. Baker told "What Washington would do if he were here today," in an entertaining manner depicting the part the "Father of his Country" would play in present day affairs should his life have been set for this period instead of the trying Revolutionary days.

The meeting throughout was most enjoyable and a credit to the two orders—the Patriotic Order Sons of America and the Order of Independent Americans whose joint committee consisting of the following had charge of the affair, S. G. Spangler, Prof. J. Louis Sowers, J. C. Wierman, Frank Garlach, C. B. Kitzmiller, John McDonnell, Gervus Myers, J. P. Oyler, Theodore Frech and Irvin Leech.

How to Make Currant Bread

Housewives who have heard about the wholesomeness of Currant Bread and know that it is as nourishing as it is "good to eat" will appreciate these two new recipes.

No. 1.—Scald 2½ cups milk. When cool add three tablespoonfuls sugar, a little salt, and butter the size of an egg. Dissolve ½ compressed yeast cake in half cup warm water and add to milk. Stir in flour enough to make a batter and add one pound of currants washed and dried. Add flour. When raised knead again and place in pans for baking. Be sure to allow enough time for bread to raise in the pans.

No. 2.—Scald (do not boil) 1½ cups sweet milk and one cup water. When tepid add ½ cake compressed yeast, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Stir in enough whole-wheat flour to make a stiff batter. Allow to raise. When light add one egg, one tablespoonful of melted butter, 1½ cups of cleaned and dried currants. Beat well, then add whole-wheat flour to make a soft dough. Work well, mould into two loaves, let raise until light, and then bake thoroughly.

There is nothing so good as Currant Bread for growing children. It makes ideal school lunches. That no butter is needed is also worth considering.

CONFEDERATES PLAN TO COME

Field Representative of Anniversary Commission Says that Southern States will Send Veterans Here for Jubilee.

Confederate veterans will come to Gettysburg in large numbers for the fiftieth battle anniversary celebration according to Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, field secretary of the celebration commission, who returned Friday from a tour of the Southern States in the interest of the commission, and at a meeting of the executive committee reported that the event is looked forward to with eager anticipation by many in the South.

Colonel Beitler visited South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Kentucky, Virginia and Maryland. In all of these states except Georgia the legislatures are in session. General Irvine C. Walker, of South Carolina, commander of the United Confederate Veterans, accompanied Colonel Beitler, and the two appeared before the legislatures and explained the object and scope of the celebration in July, 1913.

According to Colonel Beitler's report it is practically certain that all of the Southern States will name commissions and make appropriations for the transportation of their veterans to Gettysburg and their participation in the reunion exercises.

Beginning the last week in February Colonel Beitler will present to the Governors and legislatures of Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey, a report on the work thus far accomplished by the Pennsylvania commission and urge the co-operation of these states in the great celebration. Colonel Beitler in an address to the committee said he had found everywhere in the South a desire on the part of the Confederate veterans and citizens generally to participate in the Gettysburg jubilee.

MISS MARY METCALF

Miss Mary Metcalf, until about fifteen years ago a resident of York Springs and well known there and elsewhere in the county, died early Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesly Dicks in New Oxford in her eighty ninth year.

Funeral Monday afternoon with interment in the cemetery at York Springs.

PREPARE FOR THE SPRING PRIMARY

County Commissioners Announce the Spring Primary which will be Held on April Thirteenth. These to be Voted for.

The commissioners of Adams county have issued a proclamation in which they announce that the spring primary election will be held Saturday, April 13, next, when the several political parties will name candidates for congress, the general assembly and delegates to the state and national conventions. The proclamation declares that the election will be held in all the voting precincts in the county between the hours of 2 and 8 p m. on that day.

The several political parties—the Republican, Democratic, Prohibition, Socialist and Keystone—have filed with the commissioners the necessary preliminary notices, entitling them to have ballots printed for use at the primaries. The delegate petitions are filed with the commissioners, while those aspiring for congressional and assembly honors have to be filed in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth, Harrisburg.

There will be eight delegates chosen to national conventions in this Congressional district. The Prohibitionists will have three, the Republicans and Democrats each two and the Socialists one. Each of these parties elects as many alternates as delegates. The number of delegates to state conventions to be chosen in the county is 8. The Democrats are entitled to two: Republicans two; Prohibitionists two Keystoners one; Socialists one.

The chairmen of the county committees of the different political organizations are required to file with the county commissioners the number of committeemen to be elected in the various districts in the county at the primaries. This is in accord with another requirement of the uniform primaries act.

The number of delegates to the conventions are computed from the general vote cast for the last governor, and county chairmen notify the commissioners of the number to which their respective parties are entitled, and also as to the number of committeemen according to the party rates.

LAD'S NARROW ESCAPE

While a son of Edward Pent, Pen Mar, was at work at Lake Royer, a cake of ice on which he was standing turned turtle and the young man was precipitated into the water. He would probably have been drowned had it not been for the workman who was nearby with an ice hook in his hands. He caught the hook in the clothing of the unfortunate lad and pulled him upon solid ice and later sent him to a nearby neighbor.

While two horses attached to a plow were being led by one of the men, the animals in turning, broke through the ice at a weak spot and plunged into the water about twelve feet deep. The man held on to the bridles of the animals and kept their heads above water while another plow was put to work cutting out a sufficient width of ice leading to shallow water, so as to enable the horses to swim to shore. After much difficulty the animals were gotten to the bank.

SIGNS GOOD FOR MANEUVER CAMP

Gettysburg Looks Like a Winner for Maneuver Camp of Regulars and Militia this Summer. No Official Announcement.

The big camp of instruction for United States Regulars and the militia of the group of states including Maryland, Pennsylvania and several other states, may be held in Gettysburg this summer giving the town a month of activity similar to July 1910 when for thirty days several thousand troops were constantly in camp east of town. No official announcement to this effect has been made from the War Department at Washington, so far as can be learned, but allusions to a Gettysburg camp are made with more or less frequency in newspaper reports. Sunday's Baltimore Sun had the following:

"In answer to inquiry, Adjutant General Macklin has advised the War Department at Washington that Maryland will send as many troops as possible to a joint army and militia camp of instruction being planned for next summer.

"While nothing definite can be decided as yet, it is probable that two regiments of infantry, Troop A, Company A of the Medical Corps and the engineer corps to be organized by Lieut. Charles E. Phelps, Jr., will be sent to Gettysburg for 10 days' service in the field with regulars."

From the above there seems to be no doubt existing that the camp will be held here, the only question being the Maryland troops to be detailed. It will be recalled that this same system was followed two years ago—each state sending some of its militia for a nine days' period of instruction, their places being taken by other troops after their departure, the system being continued until the end of the camp. Some days ago the Frederick News spoke of the possibility of the camp being held here this summer and all things point to Gettysburg.

At the time of the 1910 camp it was admitted by all the men in charge that Gettysburg was ideal for camp and maneuver purposes. There was practically no sickness whatever among the soldiers other than the natural result of men getting overheated and eating large supplies of ice cream and green apples. The water supply was sufficient and satisfactory throughout the camp. The location of the camp was all that could be asked and the territory used for maneuvering was declared to be ideal.

There has been talk from time to time of the government buying permanent sites for these camps of instruction and Assistant Secretary of War Oliver, at the time of his visit to the camp in 1910, was asked what he thought of Gettysburg for such a purpose. His reply was "Your land is too valuable. It would 'bust' the bank."

But while it might be an expensive proposition to purchase ground it is known that Gettysburg is an economical place for camping purposes. The encampment of two years ago was, it is said, run at a saving over previous similar camps at other points. Railroad facilities proved adequate both in getting the soldiers here and taking them away and the camp was a success in every particular.

Though little has been said in Gettysburg relative to the maneuver camp some citizens have been giving the matter considerable time and thought and not all are allowing the chance of getting this big attraction to slip. The efforts of the few energetic ones may meet with success should be the plans of all those concerned in the progress of the town.

Matters regarding the state division encampment are not likely to reach a head for a little time but Gettysburg is apparently to get this provided the necessary arrangements can be made at this place.

FIRE DESTROYS VALLEY HOUSE

Buchanan Valley Home with All its Contents Destroyed in Fire which had Made Great Headway before Discovered.

The home of Frank Clapsaddle in Buchanan Valley was completely destroyed by fire about noon on Friday, the blaze originating from a defective flue. With the residence practically all the furniture was burned and, no insurance being carried, the loss is total.

Great headway had been gained by the flames before they were discovered and the first intimation the family had came when a portion of the roof fell in. The timbers had ignited at the garret and the entire upper portion of the building was in an angry blaze when the Clapsaddle family discovered it.

The building was a frame two story structure and burned so rapidly that it was impossible to save anything worth while. Inside of a few minutes the balance of the house was in flames and within a half hour nothing was left except a pile of burning lumber.

Neighbors have taken in the Clapsaddle family which is a large one, there being thirteen children in addition to the parents. Two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Clapsaddle have employment in Gettysburg and were notified Friday by telephone of the misfortune which had befallen their home. One is Miss Effie Clapsaddle who does clerical work for Maurice C. Fas and the other is Miss Mary Clapsaddle who is employed in the family of W. H. Tipton.

FAMILY IN NEED

The family of Frank Clapsaddle, whose home in Buchanan Valley was burned together with all the contents last Friday are in need of clothing, everything except what they were wearing having been consumed. Neighbors are taking care of the family which consists of the parents and thirteen children, nearly all of whom are at home. Clothing for men, women or children will be forwarded by Mrs. W. H. Tipton, 22 Chambersburg street, to the Clapsaddles if it is left at Mrs. Tipton's home.

CHORUS TO GIVE EASTER CANTATA

Chautauqua Chorus will Prepare for Easter Event. Will be Given More Prominence at Chautauqua than Last Year.

The Chautauqua Chorus, with its membership of almost one hundred local people will start work next week to prepare for a cantata to be given at Easter and they will also take up work preliminary to the Chautauqua sessions of next summer. What cantata will be given has not yet been determined upon but the selection will be made within a few days and practices will be held regularly.

It is now planned that the Chautauqua Chorus, which was one of the features of last year's summer assembly, be given a more prominent place on the program and, instead of their work being confined to Sunday sessions, they will also be engaged for some of the week-day meetings. An entire evening is to be given over to the local singers and will doubtless prove one of the most enjoyable sessions of the week.

While those who were members of the big chorus last summer and during the winter months will all take part it is the desire of the management that all with any vocal ability whatever join the organization and other singers in town who have not yet become members of the chorus are asked to join before the work of the spring and the summer has been taken up.

WILL BUILD NEW COTTAGES

With the approach of spring come the indications of another big building boom at Pen Mar and nearby points. From present indications the building operations this year will equal those of any previous year. Already work has begun on the erection of new cottages and it is expected to continue until next fall.

Miss Mary Lower, of Table Rock, whose cottage near Pen Mar park was destroyed by fire during the early part of last spring, will build an eight room cottage on the site of the ruins. Work will be begun sometime within the next few weeks.

All indications point to busy times throughout the Blue Ridge section for carpenters and builders as from Cherman to Edgemont scores of cottages and boarding houses will be built by parties residing in Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington and various other cities.

Mr. Black, "Why did Boston allow Chicago to finish in first division?" Mr. McIlhenny, "Why did New York finish in sixth place, after being contenders for the pennant until the last week of the season?" Mr. Miller, "What's the matter with Washington?" SEVERE STORM DOES NO HARM

Wind Storm of Great Velocity Sweeps over the County Causing Uneasiness but no Damage. High Waters Reported.

Sweeping over the country with terrific velocity, the tornado which visited the western part of the United States earlier in the week arrived over this section Wednesday evening, breaking suddenly and with no warning. The storm followed the warmer weather and rain that had prevailed for several days and caused a drop in temperature during the night.

Between three and four o'clock in the morning the storm became so violent that many people in town left their beds while many others lay awake for several hours. Houses were shaken very noticeably and beds rocked. The wind continued all night and, with less severity, during the day.

No damage of any consequence is reported from Adams County and no loss worth mentioning is known to have resulted from the storm. Some thunder and lightning accompanied the wind.

The rain and warm weather of the early part of the week weakened the ice on the nearby creeks and some danger was threatened along Marsh Creek on Thursday when the stream, greatly swollen and carrying huge cakes of ice which broke on Wednesday, swept close to some farm houses. At the homes of Mervin Bishop and Aaron Fleck the water came up almost to the doors. No real damage from this source has been reported, however, and the streams are expected to subside quickly.
